

COMPETITION

Over the last few years, the market for software or remap tuners has become alarmingly cluttered, but one company out there has forged itself a reputation and manages to stand out from the crowd.

Revotechnik mixes years of experience in the automotive industry to bring you its REVO (Resident Encrypted Variable Output) software so that motorists of modern ECU-equipped cars can enjoy a whole new level of performance. You only have to look at the Revo group thrash from PWW 5/04 to see what it's all about.

Now PWW, in conjunction with Revo, is offering one lucky reader the chance to experience the Revo revolution first hand. Revo's magic wand (or should that be SPS?) being as far reaching as it is, the competition is open to any reader from a country with an authorised Revo dealer.

That means the UK, USA, Canada, Australia, Asia – even Finland! As long as there is a code for your car, and there is a dealer in your country, you're in with a chance of getting your car Revo'd. To make sure you're eligible to enter, and for all the Revo information you could possibly want, visit www.revotechnik.com

You don't even have to answer a question. The winner will be drawn at random from the legendary PWW tombola. Just write down your full contact details and send them in on a postcard by 31 August 2004. Employees of Unity Media plc or Revo are not eligible to enter the competition and no correspondence will be entered into once a winner has been drawn ●
